FIG. A HAND-CUT DOVETAIL ON THE OVO TABLE, OILED OAK

A NOTE ON MAKING

Furniture that asks to be kept

Every piece in this catalogue begins as a board in our workshop outside Uppsala. We choose timber slowly, dry it for a year, and cut joints that hold without screws, so that a chair can be taken apart, repaired and put back together long after the people who bought it have passed it on. This year we added four new families and quietly retired two, because a smaller collection lets us make each piece better.

You will find dimensions, materials and finishes for every piece, along with drawings to help you plan a room. Our finishes are samples of real material, not printed colour – ask your retailer for the swatch box before you decide. And if something you own from us needs attention, write to us: we keep the drawings for everything we have ever made.

Nothing here is made in advance. Each order is cut, joined and finished for the person who placed it, which is why we ask for six to eight weeks, and why every piece can be ordered in any finish from the materials pages.

– Ida Holm, creative director

Pieces for the room where the day slows down. Deep seats, honest materials and a scale that sits comfortably against the wall rather than in the middle of the room.

Materials & Finishes

Every timber is solid and oiled by hand; every textile is woven in Europe from natural fibre. Printed colour can only suggest the grain of an oak board or the nap of a wool – ask your retailer for the swatch box, and see each material in daylight before you choose.
